Enrollees are classified by total household income, including income received by household members who are not enrolled in Marketplace coverage. Percents are rounded to the nearest whole number, so sums may not add up to reported totals. The data is drawn from Form 1095, Exchange Periodic Data (EPD), Form 1040, and other information returns including W-2s. Further detail on the approach can be found in Lurie and Pearce (2021).

Enrollees are classified by total household income, including income received by household members who are not enrolled in Marketplace coverage. Enrollment is rounded to the nearest hundred, so sums may not add up to reported totals. State is based on a taxpayer’s address on Form 1040 for 2022 (or their address from information returns for non-filers), where available. It is further supplemented by Form 1095A. “Other” includes individuals who listed an address on their tax return that is not one of the 50 states or the District of Columbia (for example, in cases of individuals who moved after their Exchange coverage ended). The data is drawn from Form 1095, Exchange Periodic Data (EPD), Form 1040, and other information returns including W-2s. Further detail can be found in Lurie and Pearce (2021).
