April 23, 2019

The Honorable Richard E. Neal
Chairman
Committee on Ways and Means
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Chairman Neal:

I write in response to your April 13 letter to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue concerning your April 3 request to obtain the confidential tax returns (and other return information) of President Trump and related business entities for 2013 through 2018. As explained in my April 10 letter, the Department of the Treasury shares your view that the Committee’s request is unprecedented. Accordingly, the Department cannot act upon your request unless and until it is determined to be consistent with law.

Due to the serious constitutional questions raised by this request and the serious consequences that a resolution of those questions could have for taxpayer privacy, the Department is consulting with the Department of Justice. Although federal law establishes no deadline for a response to your request, we expect to provide the Committee with a final decision by May 6, after receiving the Justice Department’s legal conclusions.

As you know, the overwhelming majority of requests for tax return information from the Congressional tax committees seek statistical data to inform the drafting of tax legislation. That is wholly appropriate, and we remain committed to promptly providing information to assist the committees in their legislative work. Your April 3 request is categorically different. It seeks the returns of a single individual taxpayer for an asserted purpose that is at odds with what you and many others have repeatedly said is the request’s intent: to publicly release the President’s tax returns. The Supreme Court has made clear that exposure for the sake of exposure is never a permissible purpose of Congressional inquiries, and this principle is all the more important when private and legally protected tax information is at stake.

1 See Richard Rubin, Trump’s Tax Returns in the Spotlight if Democrats Capture the House, Wall St. J., Oct. 3, 2018 (“‘This has never happened before, so you want to be very meticulous,’ Mr. Neal said.”).

2 Unlike other provisions in section 6103, subsection (f) imposes no deadline for action on the Committee’s request. Compare 26 U.S.C. § 6103(f) with, e.g., id. at (g)(5). In the absence of a statutory deadline, agencies are entitled to a reasonable time to evaluate a requested action. While the Committee’s April 3 letter was received three months after the beginning of the current Congress, we expect to provide the Committee with a final decision in substantially less time.

History demonstrates that private tax return information is susceptible to abuse for partisan purposes—regardless of which party is in power. Unless carefully restrained by law, this risk threatens the privacy of all taxpayers. Millions of Americans are required to entrust their personal financial information to the IRS every year, and they rightly expect that their information will be used only for legitimate governmental purposes. The Department takes this public trust seriously. IRS employees are forbidden from accessing return information unless the information is necessary to perform their bona fide job responsibilities. Accessing private tax returns for any other purpose is prohibited, and intentionally disclosing tax return information for political purposes would be an egregious violation of the trust that American taxpayers place in the IRS. Any IRS employee who does so could face criminal penalties, in addition to termination.

Your request presents the question whether there are any legal limits on the ability of a Congressional tax-writing committee to obtain an individual’s private tax returns from the IRS and disclose them publicly. Your April 13 letter indicates that the Committee believes there is only one: the Committee need simply recite a legislative purpose, after which the Department must ignore all evidence in the public record, however overwhelming, that the asserted purpose is pretext for a constitutionally suspect one. We have concerns about that view of the law because it appears to neglect our respective constitutional duties. The Committee’s request presents the legal question especially starkly because the public record surrounding the request indicates an impermissible purpose that is impossible to ignore. The resolution of this issue could set a precedent that will reverberate for years to come—again, regardless of which party is in power.

Out of respect for the Committee on Ways and Means, this letter explains some of the legal concerns that have prompted the Department to consult the Department of Justice.

The Constitutional Limits

Our concerns begin with common ground. Based on your April 13 letter, the Committee appears to agree that a request under 26 U.S.C. § 6103(f)—like any government action—must comply with the Constitution. The Committee’s authority under section 6103(f) cannot, of course, exceed Congress’s powers under Article I. Consequently, parsing the language of section 6103(f) alone cannot resolve the legal issues raised by your request.

It is also common ground that Congress’s investigative power is not unlimited. Article I grants Congress no express power to investigate. The Supreme Court has explained that Congress’s investigative power exists as an “auxiliary to the legislative function,” and so “the only legitimate object” of this power is “to aid [Congress] in legislating.”4 As the authorities cited in your letter establish, Congressional committee requests for information must be pertinent to an investigation within the jurisdiction of the committee and must reasonably serve a legitimate legislative purpose.

---

The Supreme Court has made clear that “[n]o inquiry is an end in itself; it must be related to, and in furtherance of, a legitimate task of the Congress.” The Court has also made clear what is illegitimate, expressing “no doubt that there is no congressional power . . . to expose for the sake of exposure.”

The Committee’s Asserted Purpose

The Committee’s April 3 letter requests President Trump’s tax returns ostensibly to conduct “oversight” of “the extent to which the IRS audits and enforces the Federal tax laws against a President.” But an honest assessment of the Committee’s purpose must start with a recognition that the Committee’s letter is not the beginning of the story.

The Committee’s April 3 request is the culmination of a long-running, well-documented effort to expose the President’s tax returns for the sake of exposure. This effort arose from the presidential election campaign of 2016. After the President took office, this effort continued throughout the previous Congress with what you and Representative Pascrell described in a committee report as the Committee Democrats’ “steadfast . . . pursuit” to use section 6103(f) “to have [President Trump’s] individual tax returns disclosed to the public.” Then-Leader Pelosi and senior Ways and Means Committee members repeatedly acknowledged that the purpose of requesting the President’s tax returns was to “make those tax returns public.” Indeed, the chief architects of the April 3 request also served as original cosponsors of a House resolution of inquiry that sought to force the immediate public release of the President’s tax returns.

Although those efforts failed in the last Congress, Leader Pelosi made clear that exposing the President’s tax returns would remain a top priority in the current Congress, describing it as “one of the first things we’d do—that’s the easiest thing in the world.” With the new majority in place, the Committee took up Speaker Pelosi’s charge and, in your own words, “constructed” a “case” to obtain the President’s tax returns. The public record demonstrates that the animating purpose of this effort was and remains exposure of a political opponent’s private tax information. A chronology of this public record is attached to this letter as Appendix A.\textsuperscript{12}

5 Watkins, 354 U.S. at 187.

6 Id. at 200.

No doubt aware of the public record showing that the Committee’s constructed case is a pretext for exposure, the Committee has urged the Department to “not . . . question or second guess” the motives behind the legislative purpose the Committee now invokes. But it is not questioning or second-guessing the Committee to credit its Chairman’s and Members’ own public statements as to the purpose of their request, or to credit similar statements by the Speaker of the House.

Even if those public statements could be ignored, the Committee’s stated interest in “the extent to which the IRS audits and enforces the Federal tax laws against a President” is difficult to accept on its face. As an objective matter, the terms of the Committee’s request do not fit the Committee’s asserted purpose in several respects. To start, the Committee does not inquire about the IRS’s procedures for presidential audits. Although the IRS has conducted mandatory examinations of Presidents’ tax returns since 1976, the Committee does not request additional information about those policies or ask whether those policies and procedures have changed over time.\textsuperscript{13} Nor does the Committee ask for any information about the extensive protections that ensure such audits are conducted with extreme confidentiality and without improper interference.

In addition, the request seeks tax information related only to the current President. The Committee’s exclusive focus on a single taxpayer cannot be explained by the public availability of past Presidents’ tax returns; to the best of our knowledge, much of the tax information that the Committee requests for President Trump, including all IRS audit files, has never been publicly released with respect to any past President.

Further, any genuine assessment of the effectiveness of a specific taxpayer audit requires reviewing the outcome of the audit—revisions in liability, settlements, and other resolutions. But rather than request completed audit files on past Presidents, the Committee seeks the returns of the only President for whom the audit process necessarily remains ongoing, as sitting Presidents are subject to mandatory examinations under IRS rules.\textsuperscript{14}

On the other hand, the Committee’s request is perfectly tailored to the other purpose that you have repeatedly and publicly stated: to obtain and expose the President’s tax returns. \textit{See App. A.}

\textbf{The Department’s Concerns}

The Committee has not denied that the stated purpose of its April 3 letter is a constructed pretext. Instead, it has maintained that the veracity of its stated purpose is irrelevant as a matter of law. As noted, the Committee’s April 13 letter asserts that “the motivations underlying Congressional action

\textsuperscript{12} Appendix B, also attached to this letter, catalogues additional statements concerning the Committee’s purpose and the efforts culminating in the Committee’s April 3 request.

\textsuperscript{13} \textit{See IRM} § 3.28.3.1; \textit{see also} Joint Committee on Taxation, Background Regarding the Confidentiality and Disclosure of Federal Tax Returns (JCX-3-19) (Feb. 4, 2019), https://www.jct.gov/publications.html?func=startdown&id=5159.

\textsuperscript{14} \textit{See IRM} § 3.28.3.4.3 (“Individual income tax returns for the President and Vice President are subject to mandatory examinations.”).
are not to be second guessed.” It is not clear to us that the Executive Branch must always accept a pretextual legislative justification as constitutionally adequate, in the face of widespread, contemporaneous acknowledgment by the Committee Chairman and other key Members that the actual objective is to use the IRS as a means to expose the tax returns of a political opponent. Nor do we share your confidence that there is no limit to the willingness of the courts to accept obviously pretextual legislative justifications for information demands—particularly when private tax information is at risk.

We emphasize that the Department’s concerns with the legality of the Committee’s request extend far beyond its particulars. Taxpayer confidentiality is the linchpin of our tax system of self-assessment and voluntary compliance. The IRS promises to “administer the disclosure provisions of the Internal Revenue Code . . . according to the spirit and intent of these laws, ever mindful of the public trust.”15 This trust would be eroded if government officials could obtain the tax returns of any person they dislike solely for the sake of exposure, to achieve partisan political aims, or for other impermissible purposes—merely by constructing a pretextual case and demanding all other government actors blindly defer to that pretext. If that were so, nothing could stop a committee chairman from obtaining the tax returns of any politically disfavored individual—whether it be the head of a civil rights organization, an executive of a major corporation, a political donor, or a local activist. In all of these cases, a committee chairman would need only assert, as here, that he wants the returns of a particular individual in order to review the adequacy of the IRS’s process of auditing that individual.

The Department recognizes that the Executive Branch and Legislative Branch have an obligation to work together to accommodate their respective legitimate needs and interests. To the extent the Committee wishes to understand, for genuine oversight purposes, how the IRS audits and enforces the Federal tax laws against a President, we would be happy to accommodate that interest by providing additional information on the mandatory audit process. I would encourage the Committee to defer its unprecedented request and revisit this issue after it has the opportunity to work together with the Department to meet its stated legislative needs.

Although the Committee has asserted that any response from the Department other than production of the requested materials will be “interpreted as a denial,” that would be a misinterpretation. The Committee’s request has not been denied or granted at this time. The Department expects to take final action on the Committee’s request by May 6, after receiving the Justice Department’s legal conclusions.

Sincerely,

Steven T. Mnuchin

---

APPENDIX A

Chronology

The 2016 Election

The effort to expose President Trump’s tax returns began during the 2016 election. The Democratic candidate for President urged then-candidate Trump to release his returns. When he declined to do so, the Democratic candidate sought to generate political pressure to force their release, repeatedly criticizing his decision and expressing her belief that public exposure of the returns would be politically damaging to her opponent.¹

Representative Neal’s Advocacy for Exposure

When President Trump took office after the election, the House Minority Leader and senior Democratic members of the Committee on Ways and Means (including Ranking Member Neal) took up their party’s election season demands in Congress. Their chosen tool was section 6103(f). The stated rationales have shifted over time, but the objective remained constant: use section 6103(f) to obtain the tax returns and make them public.

As Ranking Member of the Committee, Representative Neal immediately began urging the Committee to obtain President Trump’s tax returns for the purpose of releasing them. In February 2017, he explained his desire for a public opportunity to “see the tax forms” and for “the media to sift and sort” them.² In March 2017, Ranking Member Neal and other Members urged Chairman Kevin Brady to submit a section 6103(f) request “for copies of the President’s federal tax returns for the last ten years.”³ They explained that the Committee should “then vote . . . to submit the President’s federal tax returns to the House of Representatives and Senate—thereby, if successful, making them available to the public.”⁴ In April 2017, Ranking Member ¹ See, e.g., The Lead with Jake Tapper (CNN television broadcast May 11, 2016) (“[W]hy doesn’t he want to release them? Yes, well, we’re going to find out.”), http://www.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/1605/11/cg.01.html; New Day (CNN television broadcast Aug. 2, 2016) (“We would like to see those tax returns, wouldn’t we?”), http://www.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/1608/02/nday.03.html; The Situation Room (CNN television broadcast Aug. 12, 2016) (“He refuses to do what every other presidential candidate in decades has done and release his tax returns.”), http://www.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/1608/12/sitroom.01.html; Erin Burnett OutFront (CNN television broadcast Sept. 6, 2016) (“He said that the American people don’t care about his tax returns, and in fact, he’s also said that it’s none of our business. I just think he’s dead wrong.”), http://www.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/1609/06/ebo.01.html; The Situation Room (CNN television broadcast Sept. 7, 2016) (“He clearly has something to hide.”), http://www.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/1609/07/sitroom.02.html; Newsroom (CNN television broadcast Sept. 27, 2016) (“Maybe he doesn’t want the American people, all of you watching tonight, to know that he’s paid nothing in Federal taxes. . . .”), http://www.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/1609/27/cn.03.html.

⁴ Id.
Neal recalled the 2016 election and asserted that President Trump was “supposed to” have made these returns available to the public as a candidate.\(^5\)

Ranking Member Neal also served as an original cosponsor of a resolution of inquiry, H. Res. 186, providing that “the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to furnish to the House of Representatives, not later than 10 days after the adoption of this resolution, the full tax returns of Donald J. Trump for tax years 2006 through 2015.”\(^6\) Ranking Member Neal explained that the resolution was designed to force the immediate public exposure of those returns.\(^7\)

On March 30, 2017, the Committee voted down H. Res. 186 and issued a report condemning the resolution as an “abuse of authority.”\(^8\) In dissenting views included in the committee report, Ranking Member Neal reiterated his “steadfast” objective of exposing the President’s tax returns to the public:

Committee Republicans continue to block our requests for this Committee to exercise its authority under Section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code to obtain, examine, and make available to the public President Trump’s federal tax returns… Committee Democrats remain steadfast in our pursuit to have [President Trump’s] individual tax returns disclosed to the public.\(^9\)

Ranking Member Neal’s dissenting views made no mention of any interest in understanding how the IRS audits and enforces the Federal tax laws against a President, as the Committee’s April 3 letter now asserts.

Other Senior House Democrats’ Advocacy for Exposure

Leader Pelosi and other senior Ways and Means Committee members also repeatedly stated that the purpose of requesting President Trump’s tax returns was to “make those tax returns public.”\(^10\) Leader Pelosi explained that requesting the returns would satisfy the public’s “right to know”\(^11\) and complained that Republicans “won’t join us in the release of the President’s tax returns.”\(^12\)

---

\(^5\) “This is not about the law, this is about custom and practice. It’s a settled tradition… candidates reach the level of expectation that they’re supposed to release their tax forms.” Press Conference, Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, Demanding a Vote Requiring President Trump to Release Tax Returns (Apr. 5, 2017), https://www.speaker.gov/newsroom/4517/ (remarks of Ranking Member Richard Neal).

\(^6\) H. Res. 186, 115th Cong. (Mar. 9, 2017).

\(^8\) Ways & Means Report, at 3.

\(^9\) Ways & Means Report, Dissenting Views, at 7-8 (emphasis added).

\(^12\) Press Conference, Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (July 13, 2017), https://www.speaker.gov/newsroom/71317-8/.
Exposure for the sake of exposure was the one constant purpose that drove the requests that Ranking Member Neal and other senior Committee members advocated throughout the previous Congress. In addition, Congressional leaders offered a wide variety of evolving rationales and speculation about what, if anything, might be found in the tax returns upon their exposure. Before the conclusion of the Special Counsel’s investigation, a common theory was that the President’s tax returns would show “the President’s relationship with Russia,” “disruption of our [2016] election,” and “any personal embarrassment to the President.” Leader Pelosi speculated: “We think [the returns] will show us some connection that will be useful in the investigation of what do the Russians have on Donald Trump . . .”

Another theory offered by the lead sponsor of H. Res. 186, Representative Pascrell, was that exposure of the President’s tax returns would help “make sure the President and his family are not hiding financial ties that could cause conflicts in decision making.” Representative Pascrell also thought it was “imperative for the public to know” the President’s “self-reported net worth,” and Ranking Member Neal thought they should know “just how extensive [his] overseas investments have been,” based on the tax returns.

In yet another theory, Ranking Member Neal’s dissent in support of H. Res. 186 explained that the President’s tax returns would give the “clearest picture” of the President’s “financial health” and inform the consideration of tax reform legislation (which was enacted in December 2017).

Other theories included speculation that the tax returns would expose the President’s “emoluments”; would show his “charitable donations” or “tax loopholes”; would reveal whether he had a “Chinese connection”; or would “maybe . . . be a path to some other questions." At other times, Leader Pelosi simply explained that exposure of the President’s tax returns would “fulfill” a campaign “promise,” or would “honor tradition.”

---

Although the efforts to force the public release of President Trump’s tax returns in the previous Congress failed (despite numerous letters, committee amendments, resolutions, and other attempts),24 Leader Pelosi made clear that the effort would continue if Democrats took the House in 2018. The San Francisco Chronicle reported in October 2018 that Leader Pelosi “told the [paper’s] editorial board” that “demanding the president’s tax returns ‘is one of the first things we’d do—that’s the easiest thing in the world.’”

The Committee’s Construction of a Pretextual Purpose

With a new Democratic majority in the House, the Committee pressed ahead in the effort to obtain and release the President’s tax returns. Chairman Neal had recognized the unprecedented nature of the Committee’s planned request: “This has never happened before, so you want to be very meticulous.”

In January 2019, the Committee spokesperson explained the plan to “force” the disclosure of the President’s returns: “[Chairman Neal] wants to lay out a case about why presidents should be disclosing their tax returns before he formally forces [the President] to do it.”

Because Congress may only conduct investigations to further a legitimate legislative purpose, Congressional investigations ordinarily begin with a legislative purpose, and that purpose defines the scope of the documents that are pertinent to the Committee’s investigation.28 But here, by the Committee’s own admission, the Committee’s investigation began in the opposite direction. The Committee started with the documents it planned to obtain and release (the President’s tax returns), and then it sought—in Chairman Neal’s words—to “construct[]” a “case” for seeking the documents that would appear to be in furtherance of a legitimate legislative purpose.29

---

23 Blog Post, Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, Where are President Trump’s Tax Returns?, (June 20, 2017), https://www.speaker.gov/newsroom/where-are-president-trumps-tax-returns/.
The Committee knew that exposure for the sake of exposure would not be a legitimate purpose, and so the Committee could no longer rely upon prior statements to that effect. At the same time, the Committee lacked jurisdiction to rely upon other frequently cited public justifications for the request—such as interest in “the Russian connection” and the President’s alleged financial conflicts of interest. Other House committees might have tried to make 6103(f) requests based upon such justifications, but no other House committee would have the authority to publicly release the tax returns after obtaining them. As the Committee was advised by the former Chief of Staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation, there is “one key for purposes of disclosing the information to the public” and the statute “gave that key to the tax committees.” To use this key, the Committee on Ways and Means had to make the request, and the other justifications that might have been offered by other committees had to be discarded.

Thus, the Committee with the key to publicly disclose the tax returns, in Chairman Neal’s words, “constructed” a “case” to justify its request. The result was the Committee’s letter of April 3, asserting a single legislative interest in “the extent to which the IRS audits and enforces the Federal tax laws against a President,” and requesting the tax returns and related documents of just one of them—President Trump.

---

republicans-congress/index.html ("[W]e wanted to make sure that the case that we constructed was in fact one that would stand up under the critical scrutiny of the federal courts.").

32 Serfaty, supra note 30 (quoting Chairman Neal).

APPENDIX B

Additional Statements

Presidential Candidate Hillary Rodham Clinton (May 11, 2016)

When you run for president, especially when you become the nominee, that is kind of expected. My husband and I have released 33 years of tax returns. We have got eight years on our Web site right now. So you have got to ask yourself, why doesn't he want to release them? Yes, well, we're going to find out.

The Lead with Jake Tapper (CNN television broadcast May 11, 2016),

Presidential Candidate Hillary Rodham Clinton (Aug. 2, 2016)

We would like to see those tax returns, wouldn't we?

CNN New Day (CNN television broadcast Aug. 2, 2016), http://www.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/1608/02/nday.03.html.

Presidential Candidate Hillary Rodham Clinton (Aug. 12, 2016)

He refuses to do what every other presidential candidate in decades has done and release his tax returns.

The Situation Room (CNN television broadcast Aug. 12, 2016),

Presidential Candidate Hillary Rodham Clinton (Sept. 6, 2016)

He said that the American people don't care about his tax returns, and in fact, he's also said that it's none of our business. I just think he's dead wrong. He clearly has something to hide.

The scams, the frauds and the questionable relationships, the business activities that have stiffed workers, refused to pay small businesses, so, clearly, his tax returns tell a story that the American people deserve and need to know.

Erin Burnett Outfront (CNN television broadcast Sept. 6, 2016), http://www.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/1609/06/ebo.01.html.
Presidential Candidate Hillary Rodham Clinton and Vice Presidential Candidate Tim Kaine
(Sept. 7, 2016)

  Clinton:  He clearly has something to hide. We don’t know exactly what it is, but we’re getting better guesses.

  ***

  Clinton:  Clearly, his tax returns tell a story that the American people deserve and need to know.

  ***

  Kaine:  Maybe he doesn’t want people to see that he’s got some connections.

The Situation Room (CNN television broadcast Sept. 7, 2016),

Presidential Candidate Hillary Rodham Clinton (Sept. 27, 2016)

  Maybe he doesn’t want the American people, all of you watching tonight, to know that he’s paid nothing in Federal taxes.

CNN Newsroom (CNN television broadcast Sept. 27, 2016),

Ranking Member Richard Neal (Jan. 12, 2017)

  We request that you join us in fulfilling our sworn constitutional duty by seeking and obtaining copies of the following documents: President-Elect Trump’s personal and corporate tax returns, domestic and foreign, for the past five years, regardless of whether they are still under audit . . . and all other documents necessary to help protect against violations of the Emoluments Clause of the Constitution and conflicts of interest, including with foreign adversaries such as Russia.

  President Trump has chosen to keep an ownership stake in his businesses, the scope of which we have no knowledge of as he has refused to disclose his tax returns. We believe that it is imperative for the public to know and understand his 564 financial positions in domestic and foreign companies and his self-reported net worth of more than $10 billion.
We know that state-owned enterprises in China and the United Arab Emirates are involved in his businesses, and that his business ties stretch to India, Turkey, the Philippines, and beyond. Russia, Saudi Arabia, and Taiwan may also have ties to his businesses, these foreign entities are paying rents, licensing agreement payments, and issuing permits for developments -- effectively giving them a tool to influence our new President.

***

If the President does not either release his returns or consent to examination of such returns by this Committee, I urge you, as Chairman of the Committee and pursuant to Section 6103(f)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code, to submit a written request to the Secretary of the Treasury for copies of the President’s federal tax returns by February 15, 2017. These returns and all accompanying return information should then be made available for examination by all Committee Members in a closed executive session. I further request that the Committee then vote in this closed session to submit the President’s federal tax returns to the House of Representatives—thereby, if successful, making them available to the public.

***

I believe the powerful Ways and Means Committee has the responsibility to use that power to ensure proper oversight of the executive branch by requesting a review of President Trump’s tax returns and moving towards a formal release of these documents to the public.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Feb. 5, 2017)

I want to know what the Russians have on Donald Trump. I think we have to have an investigation by the FBI into his financial, personal and political connections to Russia, and we want to see his tax returns, so we can have truth in the relationship between Putin, whom he admires, and Donald Trump.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Feb. 8, 2017)

As you know, I’ve been questioning the President’s relationship with Russia. It’s extremely alarming, and it could undermine our national security. What on earth do the Russians have on Donald Trump? That he could flirt with the idea of lifting sanctions on Russia despite their aggressive military behavior? That he could lift the sanctions already on the successor to the KGB a group that we know hacked into our systems, disrupting our election? That he is saying things about a person, that qualifies as a war criminal and giving some equivalence to the United States of America? This is the President of the United States. The President of the United States.

So I’m just saying, at least show us your tax returns. Is the audit over? Is this the audit for eternity? And of course that’s never been a justification for not releasing your tax returns. The President continues to hide his tax returns which could provide vital insight into what financial influence Russia has on him, whether it’s personal, political or financial. We call upon the FBI to do that investigation, it is in our national security interest. Chairman Brady is Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and Chairman of the Joint Committee of Taxation, is empowered to demand Trump’s tax returns from the Secretary of the Treasury. All he has to do is ask, and hold a committee vote to make those tax returns public.

Mr. President what do the Russians have on you personally, politically or financially?

The process is – the privilege only goes to the Chairman to make the request. But then the committee can vote to make the tax returns public. This is as you may recall, you wouldn’t recall, but in your history books you may read what happened with President Nixon a long time ago. So we’re calling on Chairman Brady to bring out those tax returns.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Feb. 13, 2017)

The reports of the Trump-Russia dossier gain credence with each passing day. As long as Republicans refuse to compel the release of President Trump’s tax returns, they are complicit in covering up Russia’s financial, personal and political hold on the Administration.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Feb. 14, 2017)

And again Mr. Neal, whose importance in this meeting is that we need to see the truth of President Trump’s investments. His committee has the authority, the chairman of the committee in the House or the chairman of the committee in the Senate, Chairman Brady or Chairman Hatch and in addition to the Finance Committee, and Ways and Means Committee – the Joint Committee on Taxation, the chairman on that committee, Mr. Brady, again, have the authority to ask the Secretary of the Treasury for the tax returns of anyone in our country if there’s reason to know that.
They can ask for the president’s tax returns, and then by a vote in their committee, they can decide where they should be released to the public, so there’s another stonewalling because they said they can’t be caught up in rummaging. This isn’t rummaging, this is truth and consequences. The American people have a right to know the truth. We see the consequences which can be dangerous to our national security.

So the question is, why is the FBI not fully investigating the political, personal, and financial ties of Donald Trump to the Russians? Show us your tax reforms -- return so we can see what some of that connection might be, and stop flirting with lifting sanctions and condemning the START Treaty and the rest of that, which have -- because you’re flirting with Russia, which has a direct impact on the safety of the American people.

The president and the Congressional Republicans have been very vocal about their desire to enact comprehensive tax reform for this congress. We believe it is imperative for the public to know and understand how such tax reform will benefit the president.

* * *

This is not willy-nilly, this is a serious attempt to get the truth to the American people, and you will decide Mr. Chairman, using the power of this committee to make them public.

Ranking Member Neal (Feb. 14, 2017)

The President has indicated during the course of the campaign that only he knows how to fix the tax system and as we proceed to tax reform, which is a very complex issue and matter, as we all know, and how difficult it is to do. There is an opportunity here for all of us to cooperate and for the president to lead the way. So I am in support of Mr. Doggett’s amendment and Mr. Pascrell’s letter.

The only way you will bury the doubts is by letting the public see the information.

Amendment Offered by Rep. Lloyd Doggett (D-TX) (Feb. 14, 2017)

Amend the Ways and Means Committee oversight plan by adding the following under matters under the Committee's Tax Jurisdiction:

Pursuant to Section 6103(f)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code, the Chairman of the Committee will submit a written request to the Secretary of the Treasury by March 1, 2017, for copies of the President's federal tax returns for the last ten years. These returns and all accompanying return information should then be made available for examination by bipartisan Committee staff, and additionally, in executive session, by all committee members. The Committee will review potential conflicts and violations of the emoluments clause, and potential entanglements with foreign governments and foreign state owned enterprises.

Ranking Member Richard Neal (Feb. 14, 2017)

The last seven American presidents have released to the American people their tax forms. And they've done it as a standard operating procedure through the course of the campaign and then subsequently during their time as president.

It was an annual event, and there was sufficient opportunity then for members of Congress, members of the administration and the media to sift and sort what those tax forms told us. So in this instance, I think there is, again, an opportunity for all of us to review the president's tax forms to find out just how extensive the overseas investments have been.

And it'll then give the American people the chance to see it. He indicated that once the audit was done, that he would release the tax forms, and then pointed out just a few weeks ago through a spokesperson that the American people didn't care about those tax forms.

Well I believe that ABC News has indicated that 75 percent of the American people would like to see the tax forms, consistent with what the last seven American presidents have done...

Since February, we've held nine votes on the floor of the House of Representatives. And in -- March 1st, I offered a resolution of inquiry that was debated in the Ways and Means Committee. At each turn, the Republicans in Congress blocked our efforts.

Why are they hiding and being complicit, to use the speaker's -- the leader's word, in keeping Trump's conflicts secret and hidden? Why? Why is that? Why won't Republican members of Congress use their authority in the law to provide oversight and make sure the president and his family are not hiding financial ties that could cause conflicts in the decision-making?

We have no way of knowing whether Mr. Trump or his firms have received Russian income or loans or entered into Russian-linked partnerships. We have a right to know that.

The legislative branch has the responsibility and the authority to check the executive branch, under Section 6103 of the tax code, which allows for an examination of his returns, the authority put in place specifically so Congress could examine conflicts of interest in the executive, following that great scandal in the early 1920s.

Today, I'll be introducing a new resolution of inquiry to give the Ways and Means Committee another chance to get it. And -- and by the way, in conclusion, it's not enough for Republican congressmen to go to town meetings and say, "Yes, the president should give us his tax returns," and then not -- come back to Washington and not have the courage to stand up for their convictions and say, "This is the direction we should be going."

And that's not good enough. So there's been over 20 people on the other side that have said he should release his tax returns, but will not vote to do it. Congress can, and must, use its authority to address President Trump's tax returns and give the American people the transparency they deserve.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Feb. 27, 2017)

What do the Russians have on Donald Trump that he would flirt with lifting our sanctions against Russia because of their aggression in eastern Europe? That he would undermine the START Treaty? Praise Putin and stonewall any investigation to bring the truth to light – including releasing his tax returns?

Expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that the President shall immediately disclose his tax return information to Congress and the American people.

***

Whereas, disclosure of the President’s tax returns could help those investigating Russian influence in the 2016 election understand the President’s financial ties to the Russian Federation and Russian citizens, including debts owed and whether he shares any partnership interests, equity interests, joint ventures or licensing agreements with Russia or Russians;

***

Whereas, the American people have the right to know whether or not their President is operating under conflicts of interest related to international affairs, tax reform, government contracts, or otherwise:

Now, therefore, be it resolved, that the House of Representatives shall, one, immediately request the tax return information of Donald J. Trump for tax years 2006 through 2015 for review in closed executive session by the Committee on Ways and Means, as provided under section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code, and vote to report the information therein to the full House of Representatives; two, support transparency in government and the longstanding tradition of Presidents and Presidential candidates disclosing their tax returns.

To restore the dignity of the House, we must use our authority to request President Trump’s tax returns and give the American people the transparency they deserve.

***

Let’s shine a bright light on the President’s conflicts together, together, as we, as a Congress, and the broader American public can judge whether his decisions are being made for himself, his business interests, or for the greater good of the American people.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Feb. 28, 2017)

Tonight, House Republicans made themselves accomplices to hiding President Trump’s tax returns from the American people.

Our security and our democracy have been endangered by Russia’s clear influence on the Trump Administration. The American people deserve the truth about Russia’s personal, political and financial grip on President Trump. If there’s nothing there, then what are Republicans afraid of?

The President’s refusal to release his tax returns is yet another example of his contempt for the promises he made in his campaign. While Republicans stonewall an independent investigation, Democrats will continue to demand the truth for the American people.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Feb. 28, 2017)

What we are calling for is an independent outside commission, take it away from Congress, take it away from politics, an independent outside commission to look into the political, personal and financial ties of the Trump organization -- him personally, his businesses, his campaign -- to the Russians.

***

The American people want to know the truth. He could begin by releasing his tax returns. Why should every president since Gerald Ford in modern history have released his tax returns, but this president says I’m above not only the law but the traditions of the office that I hold?

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Mar. 2, 2017)

Well, in all of this all roads lead to the Republicans in the Congress. What are they afraid of? They have been afraid of the truth every step of the way. They don’t want to see the President’s tax returns, when every President since Gerald Ford, every President in modern times has released his tax returns, and candidates release their tax returns.

So what is it? That would be a key indicator of their interest in the truth. So the question is to them, what are they afraid of in the tax returns? What are they afraid of in the investigation of the Russian involvement to undermine our democracy, to repeat that in other countries, to come back here and do that again?
Press Conference, Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Mar. 2, 2017),
https://www.speaker.gov/newsroom/322017-3/.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Mar. 3, 2017)

What do the Russian have on Donald Trump that he would do that? And I don't know who knew what in all of this, but it's important for us to find out and we must have that investigation.

* * *

What are -- what are the Republicans in Congress afraid of? They don't want to see the president's tax returns, the first time since Gerald Ford, who was -- since Gerald Ford, all presidents have put it out. They don't want to investigate in a wholesome way the hack -- the disruption of our system? What are the Republicans afraid of? This goes right to the Republicans in Congress -- to their doorstep. And when the public sentiment, as Lincoln said, is everything.

As they hear from their constituents, perhaps maybe they'll be more inclined to seek the truth.

Statement of Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, Politico Playbook Interview (Mar. 3, 2017),

We write you to request that you use your authority to request the tax returns of President Donald Trump for review by the Senate Committee on Finance and House Committee on Ways and Means.

* * *

If the President does not either release his returns or consent to examination of such returns by this Committee, we urge you, as Chairman of the Committee and pursuant to Section 6103(f)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code, to submit a written request to the Secretary of the Treasury by March 15, 2017, for copies of the President's federal tax returns for the last ten years. These returns and all accompanying return information should then be made available for examination by all Committee Members in a closed executive session. We further request that the Committee then vote in this closed session to submit the President's federal tax returns to the House of Representatives and Senate —thereby, if successful, making them available to the public.

We believe the powerful and respected Committees on Finance and Ways and Means have the responsibility to ensure oversight of the executive branch by requesting a review of President Trump's tax returns and moving toward a formal release of these documents to the public.

Expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that the President shall immediately disclose his tax return information to Congress and the American people.

***

Whereas, disclosure of the President’s tax returns could help those investigating Russian influence in the 2016 election understand the President’s financial ties to the Russian Federation and Russian citizens, including debts owed and whether he shares any partnership interests, equity interests, joint ventures or licensing agreements with Russia or Russians;

***

Whereas, the American people have the right to know whether or not their President is operating under conflicts of interest related to international affairs, tax reform, government contracts, or otherwise: Now, therefore, be it:

Resolved. That the House of Representatives shall--

1. Immediately request the tax return information of Donald J. Trump for tax years 2006 through 2015 for review in closed executive session by the Committee on Ways and Means, as provided under Section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code, and vote to report the information therein to the full House of Representatives.

2. Support transparency in government and the longstanding tradition of Presidents and Presidential candidates disclosing their tax returns.

And we can’t get the President’s tax returns. Not yet. It’s going to be embarrassing when those tax returns come out. They’re coming out sooner or later. They’re coming out sooner or later. I may have nothing at all to do with how they get out, but they’re going to get out sooner or later.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Mar. 8, 2017)

Well it’s a question of the American people wanting to know the truth. Why is it that President Trump should be the exception to every candidate or cabinet nominee for president since Gerald Ford – that the public has been able to see the President’s tax returns. What does the President have to hide? What do the Russians have on Donald Trump, personally, politically and financially, that he is keeping a secret? Why are the Republicans in Congress accomplices to that secrecy? Why are the Republicans in Congress voting to say “no, we don’t think he should release his tax returns?” It’s a very bad vote for them. That’s a very bad vote for them, that’s a very bad vote for them.

So our members – Mr. Pascrell as you know, acts with great spontaneity, yesterday Congresswoman Eshoo, others Members of Congress want to say, “we want the facts, we want the truth.” The tax returns many believe are part of the Russian connection, the disruption of our election, the money pouring into the Trump organization, any personal embarrassment to the President – we want to know the truth, and we can start by seeing his tax returns. Which is not an extraordinary request – unless you’re Donald Trump and think you’re above custom, tradition and maybe even the law. Thank you!

Press Conference, Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Mar. 8, 2017),
https://www.speaker.gov/newsroom/382017-2/.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Mar. 9, 2017)

They don’t want the American people to see the facts. They’re always afraid of the facts. It’s just a remarkable thing. They’re afraid of the facts of the President’s tax returns. And we will continue to ask for those tax returns because we want to know about the Russian connection.

What do the Russians have on Donald Trump politically, financially, and personally? What is that connection? What would the tax returns tell us about that? And we need a bipartisan, independent, nonpartisan outside investigation to get to the bottom of that.

Press Conference, Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Mar. 9, 2017),
https://www.speaker.gov/newsroom/3917/.

I think you are wrong about 90%. Even if it were only 10%, let the public see it. Let the public see it.

***

This committee should use its authority to better understand the connections between the President, and his family, and Russia.
The President now says he wants to lead the effort on tax reform. His past returns are directly relevant to our forthcoming discussions about tax reform. It is important to understand how such tax reform would benefit the President, his 564 positions in domestic and foreign companies, and his self-reported net worth of more than $10 billion.

***

We are asking for the disclosure because it is relevant to the discussion about the Russian connection, and now you all and we all say that we want to take up tax reform. The President says he wants to lead the effort. With hidden tax reform, tax returns, that is totally incredible.

Our constituents are demanding transparency.... We have the authority. We have the cause. With all of the conflicts we know about, and all that we don’t, we must gather all of the possible information we can. The IRS is best equipped to conduct financial investigations into possible crimes dealing with money. The President’s tax returns will provide us with the clues.

The House investigation has been totally discredited within the last week. Whether it was discredited or not, this committee has a role to play with reference to tax returns. And when you have the President’s son in law talking with former KGB official running a bank in Russia, and you have an indication from the President’s son a few years back that the Russians make up a pretty disproportionate cross section of a lot of our assets, and that’s a direct quote, there is reason to want to know whether there is anything in his tax returns showing payments to Russians, or payments from Russians. It may be that not every bit of the information we are seeking is not contained within the form on individual taxes that President Trump may have filed. But there may well be an indication in those returns of information that will lead to that information, and that I why I believe the President went back on his promise to the American people, and refused to disclose the very information he said he would disclose in the future when these audits were concluded. I want to know whether he has, as his son said, continued to have a pretty disproportionate cross section of a lot of their assets with the Russians.

***
I want to emphasize that the Chairman and the members of this committee are misconstruing section 6103, narrowly construing it to justify this cover-up of the Trump tax returns, and that this committee has a significant interest in these returns as it relates to the administration of our business. Both with reference to our trade agenda, from which we heard about earlier today, given the large number of trademarks that President Trump was able to magically get approved from the Chinese earlier this year, and with reference to our tax responsibilities.

* * *

Without those tax returns to know what conflicts may exist for him, what kind of self-dealing may exist for him, we will never know. Section 6103 deals with more than tax administration, it deals with the assessment, collection, enforcement, publication, and statistical gathering function under the laws and statutes. There is every reason why in terms of its work in tax and the fact that we are considering major tax legislation, that we would want to know whether he will benefit personally, and that is why he is advancing these various legislative changes.

Ryan Higgins (D-NY) (54:06): The American people have a right to know if the President would personally gain from proposals he will ask this committee to consider. The American people have a right to know if the President’s tax returns offers clarity about business ties he may have to Russia, to Germany, to Saudi Arabia, or any other foreign interest that may benefit them and or him.

House Resolution 186 (Mar. 9, 2017)

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

March 9, 2017

Mr. Pascrell (for himself, Mr. Crowley, Mr. Danny K. Davis of Illinois, Ms. Sewell of Alabama, Mr. Neal, Ms. Eshoo, Mr. Doggett, Mr. Sarbanes, Ms. DelBene, Mr. Thompson of California, and Mr. Blumenauer) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means

Of inquiry directing the Secretary of the Treasury to provide to the House of Representatives the tax returns and other specified financial information of President Donald J. Trump.
Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to furnish to the House of Representatives, not later than 10 days after the adoption of this resolution, the full tax returns of Donald J. Trump for tax years 2006 through 2015, as well as financial documentation and any information in possession of the Secretary that specify—

(1) Mr. Trump’s debts held by foreign governments and foreign companies;

(2) Mr. Trump’s investments in foreign countries and foreign enterprises; and

(3) Mr. Trump’s use of any tax shelters, corporate structures, tax avoidance maneuvers, abatements, or other loopholes to reduce or eliminate tax liability.

Committee Democrats strongly oppose the Committee's action of unfavorably reporting H. Res. 186, Resolution of inquiry directing the Secretary of the Treasury to provide to the House of Representatives the tax returns and other specified financial information of President Donald J. Trump. Committee Republicans continue to block our requests for this Committee to exercise its authority under Section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code to obtain, examine, and make available to the public President Trump’s federal tax returns.

This Committee has broad jurisdiction over a variety of laws that affect the lives of millions of Americans, including the federal tax law. The President and Congressional Republicans have been very vocal regarding their desire to enact comprehensive tax reform this Congress. Committee Democrats believe that it is imperative for the public to know and understand how such tax reform will benefit the President, his 564 financial positions in domestic and foreign companies, and his self-reported net worth of more than $10 billion.

* * *

Tax returns provide the clearest picture of a president's financial health, including how much he earns, how much tax he pays, his sources of income (e.g., capital gains, dividend income, and certain business income), the size of his deductions, whether he makes charitable contributions, and whether he uses tax shelters, loopholes, or other special-interest provisions to his advantage. All of these items are critical in order for the public to gain a more complete understanding of how tax reform will benefit President Trump and his vast business empire.

If ever there was a president with respect to which this Committee should exercise its Section 6103 statutory authority to obtain individual tax returns, President Trump is the one. A president with a vast domestic and international business empire. A president who has rebuked over 40 years of tradition and refused to release his individual tax returns to the public. A president who will negotiate and ultimately may sign comprehensive tax reform into law. A president who is not the average American—he has assets, business interests, and foreign entanglements that far surpass the average taxpayer. ... Hence, Committee Democrats remain steadfast in our pursuit to have his individual tax returns disclosed to the public.

***

Starting in February, Committee Democrats began pressing Committee Republicans to use the authority under Section 6103 to obtain President Trump's tax returns and make them available to the public. Committee Democrats have sent letters urging, and offered amendments to force, the Chairman to obtain President Trump's tax returns for review by the Committee.

***

Procedurally, upon submission to the House, the tax return and return information would become available to the public.

Expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that the President shall immediately disclose his tax return information to Congress and the American people.

***

Whereas, disclosure of the President's tax returns could help those investigating Russian influence in the 2016 election understand the President's financial ties to the Russian Federation and Russian citizens, including debts owed and whether he shares any partnership interests, equity interests, joint ventures or licensing agreements with Russia or Russians;

***
Whereas, the American people have the right to know whether or not their President is operating under conflicts of interest related to international affairs, tax reform, government contracts, or otherwise: Now, therefore, be it:

Resolved. That the House of Representatives shall--

1. Immediately request the tax return information of Donald J. Trump for tax years 2006 through 2015 for review in closed executive session by the Committee on Ways and Means, as provided under Section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code, and vote to report the information therein to the full House of Representatives.

2. Support transparency in government and the longstanding tradition of Presidents and Presidential candidates disclosing their tax returns."

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Mar. 16, 2017)

The Deflector-in-Chief’s desperation demands answer to our original question, the one I ask almost every day: What is Russia’s political, personal, and financial grip on the Trump Administration? What do the Russians have on President Trump? They have stonewalled over 100 letters from House Democrats requesting disclosure and transparency on his ties to Russia, his conflicts of interest, and other Administration actions.

You have heard me say before: this has an impact on our national security. What do the Russians have on him that he should flirt with the idea of weakening sanctions on Russia, undermining NATO and Europe? Secondly, undermining and questioning the value of the New START Treaty. Also, praising Putin at the expense of the greatness of America. What is it that they have on him? Show us your tax credits – your tax deduction – returns. Every – they did do something the other day, which was curious, to do a transom report. Who knows where that came from. What we want to see are the President’s tax returns in the same manner that every President and candidate for President – nominee of the party for President has done since Nixon, but, of course, that was demanded, but then followed through with wonderful President Gerald Ford. So, if the President wants to strengthen our security, he should come clean with the American people.

Whereas, tax returns provide an important baseline disclosure because they contain highly instructive information including whether the candidate can be influenced by foreign entities and reveal any conflicts of interest;
** **

Whereas, disclosure of the President's tax returns is important towards investigating Russian influence in the 2016 election, understanding the President's financial ties to the Russian Federation and Russian citizens, including debts owed and whether he shares any partnership interests, equity interests, joint ventures, or licensing agreements with Russia or Russian nationals, formally or informally associated with Vladmir Putin;

** **

Whereas, the American people have the right to know whether or not their President is operating under conflicts of interest related to international affairs, tax reform, government contracts, or otherwise:

Now, therefore, be it resolved that the House of Representatives shall:

One, immediately request the tax return information of Donald J. Trump for tax years 2006 through 2015 for review in closed executive session by the Committee on Ways and Means, as provided under section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code, and vote to report the information therein to the full House of Representatives;

Two, support transparency in government and the longstanding tradition of Presidents and Presidential candidates disclosing their tax returns.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Mar. 28, 2017)

Since Gerald Ford was President, every candidate for President, every nominee of a major party, every candidate for President of the United States, Democrat and Republican, has released their income tax returns out of respect for the American people-out of respect for the American people. Week in and week out--in fact, sometimes day in and day out--in committee as well as on the floor, the Republicans have kept the President's income tax returns private when the public has a right to know that, that the public has always known that about every President since Gerald Ford--in fact, since Richard Nixon; although, in his case, it wasn't voluntary.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Apr. 5, 2017)

What is President Trump hiding that he refuses to release his taxes to the American people – even as an overwhelming 74 percent demand he release them? The disturbing conflicts of interests, revelations of shady dealings, and Trump’s deep ties to Putin’s Russia must be the reason.

***

But week after week, Republicans have repeatedly voted to help President Trump stonewall the American people – complicit in keeping President Trump’s taxes and finances hidden.

That is why House Democrats, led by Congresswoman Anna Eshoo, filed a discharge petition today to #DemandAVote to require President Donald Trump to disclose his tax returns. so the American people can see for themselves the extent of his financial interests, and whether they are influencing his policy decisions toward Russia, on tax reform and other issues.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Apr. 5, 2017)

As you know, every President since Gerald Ford – actually, every nominee on both sides of the aisle since then has released their tax returns. So the history of it is important to American people. It isn’t as if the tax returns tell the whole story but they are a key that opens the door to so much information.

We’re especially concerned about any information that might show any connection – Russian connection, Chinese connection, in terms of business interests of the Trump organization to any of these countries. It’s really a very important thing.

At a time when they are saying, we don’t want to see the President’s tax return … they now say, ‘we have to protect the President’s privacy.’

It’s not a right to privacy that the President has. He’s the President of the United States there is a question about a Russia connection politically, personally, financially to the President, there’s concerns about recent actions by the Chinese government, in relation to the Trump Organization. There are plenty of reasons why we need this key to open the door to the information we need to connect the dots and if they have nothing to fear, then what are they afraid of.

Ranking Member Richard Neal (Apr. 5, 2017)

This is not about the law, this is about custom and practice. It’s a settled tradition and as I noted by using the word earlier, about begrudges — candidates reach the level of expectation that they’re supposed to release their tax forms. I’m not aware of any of the Presidents that have been cited who ever publicly suggested that they thought it was an invasion of privacy.

And this is a very simple idea in that the President’s ability to lead this country is directly undermined by the questions which continue to rise about his potential conflicts of interest, and whether or not he’s making decisions in the best interest of the American people, or in his own personal or financial best interest. One way to get at that question is a simple release of his tax returns, a tradition which has been a tradition of every president in recent history. His refusal to do that, and sadly the Republicans’ refusal so far to be part of this effort is disappointing, but we’re not going to stop. This is something the American people are demanding so that they can have a sense of what those conflicts might be, and we’re going to use every avenue we can to continue to press until we’re successful in persuading or requiring the President to share those with the American people.

I just want to thank my colleagues and Anna for their efforts on this issue, which is going to be continuous. We’re not going to let up. When you talk to people out in the country — as everybody here has said — there is real anxiety on the part of Americans about whether the President may have some divided loyalty — whether when he goes to make a decision that is supposed to be on behalf of the public. There are some other concerns of interests he has competing with that.

This is the highest office in the land. The public trust is placed in this office. That is the expectation of 330 million Americans — that you will carry out that office, recognizing the public trust that is placed in it.

And Americans just want to know that when the President is making important decisions on domestic policy and on foreign policy, that he doesn’t have divided loyalties. This is nagging away at people. And he can come clean if he provides his tax returns, which is the first important baseline step in being transparent. That will do a lot to put that anxiety to rest. But, the fact that he won’t release the tax returns, I think, is making a lot of Americans nervous.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Apr. 6, 2017)

Republicans will sell your most private information, your most private information, but they refuse to reveal the President’s tax returns, something every President since Gerald Ford has done, and indeed every nominee of the other party has done.

And there is a vital interest in the President’s tax returns. Republicans are desperate, again, to keep them secret. What is it that they are afraid of? Why don’t they have that key that 74 percent of the American people want us to unlock that door to see where it leads?

If it’s all okay, they have nothing to be afraid of. But we think that it will show us some connection that will be useful in the investigation of what do the Russians have on Donald Trump politically, personally, and financially.

Unfortunately, Donald Trump sees things differently. As we approach tax day, it’s important to remember that every President since Gerald Ford, Democrats and Republicans, have released their tax returns to the American people. Before the election, Donald Trump repeatedly promised to release his tax returns, just like Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan, George H.W. Bush, Bill Clinton, George W. Bush and Barack Obama before him. But as President, Donald Trump has broken this promise.

Is he hiding something from the American people? I certainly hope not. Here’s what I do know. The American people deserve an answer to that question. The tax return issue is about fairness. It’s about being straight with the American people. It’s about playing by the rules.

There is a cloud of uncertainty hanging over the White House when it comes to our President. He came to Washington on a promise to drain the swamp. But instead, by failing to keep his word and release his tax returns, Donald Trump is a living, breathing conflict of interest.

***
This is not a Democratic issue or a Republican issue. This is an American issue. Our Democracy was attacked. The release of the President’s tax returns will help the American people better understand the extent of Trump’s financial ties to Putin’s Russia. The American people have a right to know whether financial conflicts of interest exist between the President of the United States and a hostile foreign power.

The American people have a right to know whether the decisions being made by President Trump are in the best interest of America, or are benefiting other countries and corporations with whom he has a business relationship. The American people have a right to know whose side the President is on. His tax returns will help provide the information necessary to figure that out.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Apr. 17, 2017)

What are President Trump and the Republican Congress hiding? Every President since Gerald Ford, Democrat and Republican, has released his tax returns to the public. Despite the history, despite his own promises, President Trump and Republicans in Congress are desperate to keep the American people in the dark.

Who does President Trump owe? America needs to know. All roads lead back to the President’s tax returns – and the light they can shine on his actions and the Trump-Russia connection. Releasing the President’s tax returns is vital for our national security and our democracy.

The President has done everything possible to distract and mislead the American people about his connection to Russia and his truly unprecedented web of conflicts.

He has refused to divest his business ties or release his tax returns to the American people so they can understand his conflicts of interest and get to the truth.

Page 22 of 42
Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Apr. 23, 2017)

The infrastructure bill is one of the biggest secrets in Washington, D.C., second only to the president not showing us his tax returns.

We need to see those so we can see how his tax policy will affect his own tax situation. We need to see them so we can see what is the hold that the Russians have on him politically, financially, and personally.

Without an end to the Republican cover-up of Trump’s tax returns, we cannot determine whether this is mostly just more self-enrichment for the Trump family. Trump talks like a populist but governs like a plutocrat. Like the near trillion dollar tax cut in the failed health care bill that he endorsed, Trump’s tax plan fills the coffers of giant corporations and lines the pockets of the superrich.

This afternoon, the Administration released its principles for tax reform. I must express my concern about beginning tax reform when the public has no idea how the proposal will personally benefit the First Family.

On April 15th, thousands of Americans took to the streets and demanded transparency, truth, and accountability. They know that there is no provision in the Internal Revenue Code that prevents him from releasing his tax returns. Failure to meet this standard presents a dangerous and slippery slope for policy makers. The American people expect and deserve better.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (May 15, 2017)

One of the concerns that we have is that Russia is an adversary to the United States. And yet, when the president became president-elect, he was putting Putin on a pedestal and he was questioning whether we should even have sanctions against Russia for their aggression in Ukraine and Crimea, et cetera, and questioning the -- undermining the relationship we have with NATO, which is our transatlantic friendship for security. And it was like, why on Earth is he undermining our allies and praising Putin?

And so that's one of the things that we want to see about the investigation, because it relates to if there have -- as I said, financial. What is the financial connection? Political. They did -- it's an absolute fact -- disrupt our election by hacking and leaking. The question is, was there collusion? And, third, personally. What is it that is making him do all these special things for the Russians?

You only know that if you're basing it on fact and not just rumor and hearsay if you have the investigation. And that's why we're saying, let's just find out the truth. Let the chips fall where they may. And if he has nothing to hide, he shouldn't be opposing, nor should my Republican colleagues in Congress, be opposing the release of his tax returns, any of the investigation into other aspects of the Trump-Russia connection. And that's why when something like this comes up, it's like predictable, almost, sadly.

CNN Town Hall (CNN television broadcast May 15, 2017), http://transcripts.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/1705/15/se.01.html.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (May 16, 2017)

The question is what is the connection? And that requires investigation to get the facts that proves the case, or not. What are the Republicans and the president afraid of? The truth.

So, when it comes to our national security, here he is putting Putin on a pedestal, undermining NATO, questioning whether we should even have sanctions vis-a-vis Russia in terms of their aggression in Europe. And that is not in our national security interest. That is undermining our Trans-Atlantic pillar of strength for us. But casual about it and putting -- so what do the Russians have on him politically, personally, financially?

Go to the next step. We have a chance to see his tax returns. Show us your tax returns so we can see what the connection is between you and Russia. And, by the way, the connection between yourself and (inaudible) and the cost to the average person in our country.

So, this is about our economy as well. And then of course as I mentioned about the security of our democracy. So, this is intrinsic. It's fundamental. It's systemic. It's very important that we get to the bottom of it.

And there is so much evidence...

Expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that the President shall immediately disclose his tax return information to Congress and the American people.

***

Whereas, tax returns provide an important baseline disclosure because they contain highly instructive information including whether the candidate paid taxes, what they own, what they have borrowed and from whom, whether they have made any charitable donations, and whether they have taken advantage of tax loopholes;

Whereas, disclosure of the President's tax returns could help those investigating Russian influence in the 2016 election understand the President's financial ties to the Russian Federation and Russian citizens, including debts owed and whether he shares any partnership interests, equity interests, joint ventures or licensing agreements with Russia or Russians;

***

Whereas, the President's tax returns would show us whether he has foreign bank accounts and how much profit he receives from his ownership in myriad partnerships;

***

Whereas, the Chairmen of the Ways and Means Committee, Joint Committee on Taxation, and Senate Finance Committee have the authority to request the President's tax returns under Section 6103 of the tax code;

***

Whereas, the American people have the right to know whether or not their President is operating under conflicts of interest related to international affairs, tax reform, government contracts, or otherwise: Now, therefore, be it:

Resolved, That the House of Representatives shall--

1. Immediately request the tax return information of Donald J. Trump for tax years 2006 through 2015 for review in closed executive session by the Committee on Ways and Means, as provided under Section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code, and vote to report the information therein to the full House of Representatives
2. Support transparency in government and the longstanding tradition of Presidents and Presidential candidates disclosing their tax returns.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (May 18, 2017)

But this is something that has foreign intrigue, it has issues that relate to undermining our democracy by interference in our election. It’s about, “Show us your tax returns so we can see what public policy is regarding that, and do you have a Russian connection, Mr. President, in your dealings?” And it’s very serious.

So in order for us to move forward in a way where we’re moving forward with the American people, it’s very important that we do it based on the facts. There is reason to believe that the President was engaged in some very inappropriate, for the moment, activity. But until you have the facts that you can present to the public in the public domain so the American people are moving with you at the same time, I don’t think that our democracy is well served.

Resolution Offered by Rep. Linda Sanchez (D-CA) (May 24, 2017)

Expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that the President shall immediately disclose his tax return information to Congress and the American people.

***

Whereas, tax returns provide an important baseline of reasonable information including whether the President paid taxes, ownership interests, charitable donations made, and whether tax deductions have been exploited;

Whereas, disclosure of the President’s tax returns could help those investigating Russian influence in the 2016 election understand the President’s financial ties to the Russian Federation and Russian citizens, including debts owed and whether he shares any partnership interests, equity interests, joint ventures or licensing agreements with Russia or Russians;

***

Whereas, the President’s tax returns would show us whether he has foreign bank accounts and how much profit he receives from his ownership in myriad partnerships;

***
Whereas, the Chairmen of the Ways and Means Committee, Joint Committee on Taxation, and Senate Finance Committee have the authority to request the President's tax returns under Section 6103 of the tax code;

* * * *

Whereas, the American people have the right to know whether or not their President is operating under conflicts of interest related to international affairs, tax reform, government contracts, or otherwise: Now, therefore, be it:

Resolved, That the House of Representatives shall--

1. Immediately request the tax return information of Donald J. Trump for tax years 2006 through 2015 for review in closed executive session by the Committee on Ways and Means, as provided under Section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code, and vote to report the information therein to the full House of Representatives

2. Support transparency in government and the longstanding tradition of Presidents and Presidential candidates disclosing their tax returns.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (June 2, 2017)

And speaking of taxes, I think that the decision the President made on the Paris accord, I think that the budget that he has put forth, again, really speaks further to the fact that he should show us his tax returns. It’s very important that we see his tax returns. It relates to Russia. What do the Russians have on Donald Trump, politically, personally, and financially? And he won’t show us his tax returns, to give us some [...] maybe that would clear up the issue or maybe it will be a path to some other questions. So show us your tax returns.

We talk about lifting the debt ceiling. We talk about tax returns. We do know that what he proposed, what he was talking about before would have given him a tax break of $30 million on the year that he has revealed his tax return. A tax break of $30 million. Show us your tax returns.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (June 6, 2017)

I think we have to remove all doubt as the impact of Russians in our life. And I think it's important the American people to know what did Russians have on Donald Trump politically, financially, and personally, that he is standing in the way of this legitimate investigation as to the Russian impact on our election and to prevent them from doing it again.

***

[T]he American people have a right to know the truth. And why would the Republicans stand in the way of the truth? Why can't we see his tax returns?

New Day (CNN television broadcast June 6, 2017), http://transcripts.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/1706/06/nday.03.html.

Resolution Offered by Rep. Michael Capuano (D-MA) (June 7, 2017)

Expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that the President shall immediately disclose his tax return information to Congress and the American people.

***

Whereas, tax returns provide an important baseline of reasonable information including whether the President paid taxes, ownership interests, charitable donations made, and whether tax deductions have been exploited;

Whereas, disclosure of the President's tax returns could help those investigating Russian influence in the 2016 election understand the President's financial ties to the Russian Federation and Russian citizens, including debts owed and whether he shares any partnership interests, equity interests, joint ventures or licensing agreements with Russia or Russians;

***

Whereas, the President's tax returns would show us whether he has foreign bank accounts and how much profit he receives from his ownership in myriad partnerships;

***

Whereas, the Chairmen of the Ways and Means Committee, Joint Committee on Taxation, and Senate Finance Committee have the authority to request the President's tax returns under Section 6103 of the tax code;

***

Whereas, the American people have the right to know whether or not their President is operating under conflicts of interest related to international affairs, tax reform, government contracts, or otherwise: Now, therefore, be it:

Resolved, That the House of Representatives shall--
1. Immediately request the tax return information of Donald J. Trump for tax years 2006 through 2015 for review in closed executive session by the Committee on Ways and Means, as provided under Section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code, and vote to report the information therein to the full House of Representatives

2. Support transparency in government and the longstanding tradition of Presidents and Presidential candidates disclosing their tax returns.

The investigations are ongoing. At some point, it is unquestioned that the President's tax returns will become relevant to what the FBI is doing. It is only a matter of time.

For the integrity of the House, for the dignity of the House, I believe firmly that we should exercise the law that the Congress put in place itself to do our own due diligent investigation and not just simply sit on our hands while others do our work for us.

These documents will become public, and when they do, regardless of what they show, I believe firmly it will reflect negatively on this House for not having done our duty, for having shirked our responsibilities. That is why I believe this is a privilege of the House. That is why I believe this House should take this action.

***

There aren't any Americans that don't believe they have a right to know that their President has not been subject to undue influence. That is all this does. It draws no conclusion from it, and it allows the majority party to call on it to make the determination; not me, but the majority party; the chair of the Ways and Means Committee.

That is why I offered this resolution. That is why I think this resolution is going to continue to be offered, and, at some point, the House is going to do it. I don't know why Members of the House want to drag this out and pretend that somehow you are going to be able to avoid it. You are not. It is going to happen.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (June 9, 2017)

Well, I think he abused power. I think there is no question he abused power. Whether he obstructed justice remains for the facts to come forward, and that is what we want: the facts. And I hope that our Republican colleagues will not continue to stand in the way of our getting the facts.

Also, we’d like to see his tax returns, because that will, again, help connect the dots here. And, again, maybe it will all be exculpatory, but let’s find that out. Right now we have to remove all doubt about the integrity of our government.

Press Conference, Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (June 9, 2017),
https://www.speaker.gov/newsroom/61217-2/.

Rep. Lloyd Doggett (D-TX) (June 13, 2017)

Today, Congressman Lloyd Doggett (D-TX), Ranking Member of the Ways & means Tax Policy Subcommittee, is offering a “privileged resolution” that would require the House of Representatives to immediately request the President’s tax returns and those of his businesses. His resolution, which must be considered within two legislative days, would also postpone consideration of any tax reform legislation until the President’s tax returns are obtained.

The House Ways and Means Committee has the authority to obtain the President’s tax returns under section 6103 of the Tax Code. If this “privileged resolution” were approved, it would launch the process of reviewing those tax returns in an Executive Session of the Ways and Means Committee, which could vote to release the returns to the public.

Rep. Doggett has filed three separate amendments in the Ways and Means Committee to obtain President Trump’s tax returns – on February 14, March 8, and March 28. The Committee voted all three times along party lines to continue to cover-up the President’s tax returns, and the House has refused nine times to act on President Trump’s tax returns.

* * *

RESOLUTION

Expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that the President shall immediately disclose his tax return information to the House of Representatives and the American people.

* * *

Whereas, disclosure of the President’s tax returns could help those investigating Russian influence in the 2016 election better understand the President’s financial ties to the Russian Federation, Russian businesses, and Russian individuals;

Whereas, after breaking his pledge to make his tax returns available, President Trump instead presented a one page letter from a law firm giving him a clean bill of health on any business dealings with Russians, but failed to note that the very same law firm boasted of the “prestigious honor” of being named “Russia Law Firm of the Year” for 2016;

***

Now, therefore, be it:

Resolved, That the House of Representatives shall—

1. Immediately request the tax return and return information of Donald J. Trump for tax years 2006 through 2015, as provided under section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as well as the tax return (and return information with respect to the President’s businesses) of each business entity disclosed by Donald J. Trump on his Office of Government Ethics Form 278e, specifically each corporation and each partnership (within the meaning of subchapter K of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) where he is listed as an officer, director, or equivalent, or exercises working control; and

2. Postpone consideration of tax reform legislation until the elected Representatives of the American people in this House have obtained President Trump’s tax returns and return information to ascertain how any changes to the tax code might financially benefit the President.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (June 20, 2017)

As Speaker Ryan moves to the question and answer portion of his ‘major’ tax reform speech, we have some questions: Where are President Trump’s tax returns? What happened to ‘At some point I’ll release it’?

By blatantly refusing to reveal his tax returns, the President fails to fulfill his promise to the American people, honor tradition, and be transparent about his financial history – despite the fact that 74 percent of Americans want Presidents to disclose their tax returns. House Republicans have voted 9 times to keep President Trump’s tax returns secret.

If Speaker Ryan and House Republicans respect the oath they took to support and defend the U.S. Constitution, they must stop the pointless distractions and demand transparency and truth from the White House. American taxpayers deserve to know that the President of the United States is playing by the rules and putting the people’s business before the Trump family business.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (July 13, 2017)

Republicans . . . won't join us in the release of the President's tax returns, which could be very instructive in terms of any connection to Russia. Why should this President of all Presidents and all candidates for President in the two major parties, since Gerald Ford, not release his returns so the American people can know?

On February the 1st, I wrote a letter to the chairman of the committee which I participate in, and that is the Ways and Means Committee Chairman Kevin Brady. In that letter, I asked him to use his existing authority to obtain President Trump's tax returns for review by our committee.

And I would say, from the get-go here, that a lot of the questions that are being asked today and have been asked in the past could have been avoided if the president of the United States had followed the ethics commission and -- to divest himself of all of his holdings and assets. President chose -- chose not to do that.

And the more we get into 2017, the more we understand how the tax returns are critical. He could have avoided all this by divesting himself, but the deals that have been made just at the -- during the time that he's been the president is a reflection.

Every president -- and this has nothing to do with party affiliation, which I said to Kevin Brady in February of this year -- every president must have a clean when he goes into that office and raises his hand to be sworn, so that he can be objective in his decisions. We have no assurances of that right now, and we are not going to simply sit back and reflect on the good of his word. I'm not. I don't think many Americans are.

And members of Congress, specifically the tax-writing committees, currently have authority in the tax code to get the president's tax returns, to examine his conflicts of interest.

Resolution Offered by Rep. David Cicilline (D-RI) (July 18, 2017)

Expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that the President shall immediately disclose his tax return information to Congress and the American people.

***

Whereas, the chairmen of the Committee on Ways and Means, Joint Committee on Taxation, and the Committee on Finance have the authority to request the President's tax returns under section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986;

***

Whereas, without access to the President's tax returns, the American people cannot determine how much he will personally benefit from proposed changes to the Tax Code or from policy decisions he makes, nor can the American people fully understand the financial interests and motivations of the President;

***

Whereas, disclosure of the President's tax returns would help those investigating Russian interference in the 2016 election and assist them in better understanding the President's financial ties to the Russian Federation, Russian businesses, and Russian individuals;

***

Resolved, That the House of Representatives shall--

1. Immediately request the tax return and return information of Donald J. Trump for tax years 2006 through 2015, as provided under section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as well as the tax return, and return information with respect to the President's businesses, of each business entity disclosed by Donald J. Trump on his Office of Government Ethics Form 278e, specifically each corporation and each partnership, within the meaning of subchapter K of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, where he is listed as an officer, director, or equivalent, or exercises working control; and

2. Postpone consideration of tax reform legislation until the elected Representatives of the American people in this House have obtained President Trump's tax returns and return information to ascertain how any changes to the Tax Code might financially benefit the President.

House Resolution 479 (July 27, 2017)

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

July 27, 2017

Mr. Pascarella (for himself and Mr. Crowley) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means

Of inquiry directing the Secretary of the Treasury to provide to the House of Representatives the tax return information of President Donald J. Trump as well as the tax returns of each business entity disclosed by Donald J. Trump on his Office of Government Ethics Form 278e.

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to furnish to the House of Representatives, not later than 14 days after the adoption of this resolution, the full tax returns of Donald J. Trump for tax years 2006 through 2016, if available, as well as the tax returns for such taxable years of each business entity disclosed by Donald J. Trump on his Office of Government Ethics Form 278e, specifically each business entity specified in section 2 of this resolution; and any supplemental information in the possession of the President relating to—

(1) the amount of taxes paid by Mr. Trump and each such business entity with respect to such taxable years;

(2) the debts of Mr. Trump and such business entities which are held by foreign governments or foreign companies;

(3) the investments of Mr. Trump and such business entities which are in foreign countries or foreign enterprises;

(4) Mr. Trump’s personal and business profits received from foreign enterprises;

(5) the amount of charitable giving claimed by Mr. Trump with respect to such taxable years; and

(6) any use of tax shelters or other loopholes to reduce the amount of taxes owed.

* * *

resolution/479.

Ranking Member Richard Neal (Sept. 7, 2017)

Mr. Pascarella’s resolution would direct the Treasury Secretary to provide the House with the personal and business tax returns and other financial information of President Trump.

Republican and Democratic Presidents. They all released their tax returns to the American people.

This is not a partisan issue. The reason for releasing this information is to avoid conflicts of interest. Tax returns include important information about income and charitable giving and business interests, among other things. And this information is important for the American people to have so they know that their President is always acting in their best interest.

Therefore, I support my friend Mr. Pascrell’s resolution. I believe it’s in our country’s best interest for our Presidents to release their tax returns.

What we need to explore are the possibilities of conflicts of interest. This is not something we made up, this is provided by the law. It is a fishing expedition. Why? Because we don’t have the conclusion. You don’t get to the conclusion until you investigate, and we have that authority under the law. If you looked at the word, “under IRS audit” I want you to prove to me that he is still under audit.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Apr. 17, 2018)

While Americans file their taxes, Tax Day also serves as a bitter reminder that President Trump still refuses to show the public his tax returns. Hard-working families deserve to know how their president has padded his own pockets with a tax scam that inflicts such damage on the deficit and the future of Social Security and Medicare. As Republicans in Congress refuse to demand this basic measure of transparency and accountability from President Trump, we must ask: what does President Trump have to hide?

Rep. Lloyd Doggett (D-TX) (Sept. 13, 2018)

We of course cannot know whether the benefit for Trump will be bigly or just huge until we lift this cover up of the Trump tax returns. As the smoke continues to build with one revelation after another, there’s greater need than ever to see what Trump may be hiding in those returns, the working papers to explain them, and those for the 500 business entities which stretch from Manhattan to Azerbaijan. Trump’s tax returns relate directly to what is before us today.

Rep. Lloyd Doggett (D-TX) (Sept. 13, 2018)

The stench of corruption permeates this Administration, and it comes right from the top. This amendment is designed to end the Republican cover-up of Trump’s tax returns. While this amendment seeks to achieve the same result that I have sought with 5 prior attempts in this committee, it includes extensive new findings from some of the notable developments of recent months that make clear we are not only dealing with the self-described “King of Debt,” but someone who continues to act as if he were just King.

Trump’s tax returns relate directly to what is before us today. There is no issue this Committee could consider more important than the integrity of our tax code, and the faith that the American people have in our democracy. Trump has surrounded himself with convicted tax evaders – rich friends who have decided they are above the law, and that working people who can’t afford fancy tax lawyers should have to pick up the slack. Even Richard Nixon invited the Joint Committee on Taxation to review his tax returns, explaining that “people have got to know whether or not their President is a crook.”

While this Committee has refused to do its job—while in this Congress instead of oversight, we have been overlooking Administration misconduct—the President’s tax returns have in fact already been reviewed. That was a review that, amazingly, President Trump presented as his ‘Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval ‘to assure America he had no business dealings with the Russians.’ It was a review of his tax returns by his personal law firm, which, of course, gave him a clean bill of health on any Russian connection—only months after it boasted of the ‘prestigious honor’ of being named ‘Russia Law Firm’ of the year. I am only asking that this Committee do for the American people what the ‘Russia Law Firm of the Year’ has done for Mr. Trump.

Before this Committee considers a dime of more tax breaks, we must obtain and review the President’s tax returns. Any tax bill released should be accompanied by a line-by-line report of how much Trump, his family, and his companies will benefit from each one.

His tax returns can help tell us whether he is putting America First, or Trump first, his family second, and Russian third.

Press Account Quoting Ranking Member Richard Neal (Oct. 3, 2018)

“This has never happened before, so you want to be very meticulous.”

Press Account Quoting Ranking Member Richard Neal (Oct. 12, 2018)

“I think we would all be comfortable if this was done on a voluntary basis,” Neal said.

“If they would resist the overture then I think you could probably see a long and grinding court case,” he added.

***

“It is not cut and dry,” Neal said, noting that there was still plenty of discussion ahead for how and when to request the returns officially.

***

“Anticipate a long court case in the end,” Neal said.

Press Account Quoting Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Oct. 10, 2018)

Expect Democrats to immediately try to force President Trump to release his tax returns if they take back the House in November, Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi said Wednesday.

Demanding the president’s tax returns “is one of the first things we’d do — that’s the easiest thing in the world. That’s nothing,” Pelosi told The Chronicle’s editorial board in an hour-long interview.

Press Account Quoting Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Dec. 13, 2018)

House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) said Thursday that she expects a House committee to “take the first steps” toward obtaining President Trump’s tax returns after Democrats take control of the chamber next month, but she cautioned that securing them is “a little more challenging than you might think.”

“There is popular demand for the Congress to request the president’s tax returns,” said Pelosi, who is likely to become House speaker. “I’m sure the White House will resist, so the question is, ‘Where do we go from there?’”

Press Account Quoting Spokesperson for Ranking Member Richard Neal (Jan. 2, 2019)

Rep. Richard Neal (D-Mass.), who will be the new Ways and Means Committee chairman, wants to take some time to try to build a case with the public about why Trump ought to voluntarily release his tax filings, before tapping an obscure law that allows the heads of Congress’ tax committees to examine anyone’s returns.

“He wants to lay out a case about why presidents should be disclosing their tax returns before he formally forces him to do it.” said Dan Rubin, a Neal spokesperson. Pulling the legal trigger may not come until February at the earliest.

***

“He is a very policy-driven person, and I think he sees that if we break the glass and pull that alarm, you won’t get anything done after that,” said Rubin.

Press Account Quoting Chairman Richard Neal (Jan. 23, 2019)

The chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, U.S. Rep. Richard Neal, D-Springfield, said Wednesday he plans to request President Trump’s tax returns, but expects a drawn-out legal battle to result, and thus is choosing his words carefully on the matter.
“I plan to do it,” Mr. Neal said in a visit to the Telegram & Gazette offices. “We are now in the midst of putting together the case. It will be a long and grinding legal case.”

***

Mr. Neal added: “I hope the president will voluntarily release his tax documents. I don’t think that, given the conversation so far, there is any indication he intends to do that. I also think the public has reasonably come to expect that presidential candidates and aspirants release those documents. It’s likely to end up in a court case.”

“We need to approach this gingerly and make sure the rhetoric that is used does not become a footnote to the court case.”

He said: “I’ve been meticulous about my choice of words, for good reason.”

Press Account Quoting Chairman Richard Neal (Jan. 24, 2019)

House Ways and Means Chairman Richard E. Neal said Thursday he plans to approach the tricky topic of obtaining President Donald Trump’s tax returns “methodically and judiciously.”

Neal said he started to have “preliminary conversations” about the issue after he was named chairman-designate on Dec. 20, before he formally assumed the position after the 116th Congress began earlier this month.

“One of the things you have to be mindful of is that this has to be a part of a carefully prepared and documented legal case,” said Neal, D-Mass. “And it’s not subject to just whim and the emotion of the moment.”

Added Neal: “This has to be prepared in accordance with staff, House counsel and an understanding that this is likely to become the basis of a long and arduous court case.”

***

“We’re in this precarious period of time when the American people aren’t quite sure of what to believe about many, many issues,” Neal continued. “So again, methodically and judiciously we’ll proceed.”

Speaker Nancy Pelosi (Feb. 7, 2019)

I think, overwhelmingly, the public wants to see the President’s tax returns. And so, they want to know the truth. They want to know the facts. And he has nothing to hide.

I’ll just tell you this and go on from there, because we have important work to do, and we have important judgments to make, and we need information to make those judgments.

* * *

You have to be very, very careful if you go forward.

As I said, we are in our first month. The committees have been appointed. They have organized. They are prioritizing their work and, in terms of the tax issue, it’s not a question of just sending a letter. You have to do it in very careful way. And the chairman of the committee will be doing that.

So, I know there’s this impatience because people want to know, that answers the question, but we have to do it in a very careful way.

Press Conference, Speaker Nancy Pelosi (Feb. 7, 2019),
https://wwwSpeaker.gov/newsroom/2719-2/.

Well, the committee has a right to the returns. The law was written because it expected that a moment may occur where there’s a public interest in having a tax return gained by the committee in order to evaluate it, or acquired by the committee for this kind of evaluation.

What we need to do, and what the speaker said, and what Chairman Neal is absolutely doing is lay the record, lay the groundwork, make the justification to use this rarely used authority in order to make sure that we have a solid legal basis. So, today’s hearing was very much focused on laying a legal foundation to explore what the law allows us to do, to understand that completely, to make sure that we’re doing this in a methodical way.

This is unchartered territory. It’s clear that the president does not want some information that is included in his tax return to be revealed, otherwise he would not have broken with 50 years of norms that Democrats and Republicans have adhered to releasing tax returns. There’s a reason he doesn’t want them there.

So he will fight this, and he probably fight it as far as he can, because we expect that and for the reasons that I already stated, this is unchartered territory. It’s very important that we’re methodical and we lay the foundation for the public purpose to acquire access to these returns and that’s the process that we’re going through now.

* * *
The public has a right to know whether or not their elected officials are benefiting from the decisions that they make using the public responsibilities that the public has vested in them.

So whether it’s his personal entanglements, debt or the decisions that he’s making on policy going forward, this is the reason disclosure is so important, this is the reason that past candidates and presidents have released their returns, so the public will know whether or not the individual has entanglements that could impact their public decision making, and that’s really the purpose behind this entire area of inquiry for us.

“Evidence that Trump has abused our tax laws is plentiful,” Rep. Bill Pascrell (D-NJ), who has been making the case for pursuing Trump’s tax returns under Section 6103 essentially since Trump was inaugurated, said in an emailed statement to Vox. He cited a New York Times investigation into Trump and his family’s tax practices that suggested the family for years engaged in a number of schemes to avoid taxes, and leaked pages from Trump’s 1995 and 2005 tax returns; the 1995 ones show a nearly $1 billion loss.

“Americans have a right to know if their president has paid his taxes, if he has followed the law, and if he is free from financial conflicts of interest,” Pascrell continued. “The law is clear. Under 6103, the Ways and Means Committee chairman is entitled to request Trump’s tax returns — and the Treasury secretary is obligated to deliver them. That’s all there is to it.”

Speaker Nancy Pelosi (Apr. 4, 2019)

No president in the modern era has worked so diligently to keep their tax returns out of the public eye. What is President Trump hiding?

@SpeakerPelosi, Twitter (Apr. 4, 2019), https://twitter.com/SpeakerPelosi/status/1113886412649189376.

Press Account Quoting Chairman Richard Neal (Apr. 5, 2019)

Neal told reporters on Thursday that he took roughly three months to build the case for requesting the returns, which he argued was reasonable given the gravity of the request.
“This was a very reasoned approach. Our position from day one was that this would be measured,” Neal said. “This is likely to wind its way through the federal court system and we wanted to make sure that the case that we constructed was in fact one that would stand up under the critical scrutiny of the federal courts.”